

Hill and Dale District is sponsoring the NGC Gardening School series.

We provided these courses because most garden club members join a club to learn more about how /what to do in the garden and because they have a love of gardening. This was an educational event and was open to any garden club members plus the public.

Course #1 had 47 people attending and course #2 had 45 people in attendance.

Classroom set up

Each instructor taught their subject with a PowerPoint that was shown on a large screen that also followed their class outline.

We started with the basics but moved quickly into deeper subject matter.

Lunch was served in an adjacent room for a more relaxed environment where everyone could socialize and get away from the “books”.

October’s school for Course #2 had drawings to give the lunch centerpieces away.

These ladies are learning how to propagate.

Small cuttings were taken off of plants and then placed in an airtight container with a little bit of moisture to watch for new growth.

Course #2’s afternoon activities were to identify vegetable bugs living in and on your vegetables. Fun was had by all looking into jars and using flash cards to try and identify which garden bugs are in your yard.
